

Meet Mrs. Evenson

My name is Linda Evenson and I have been teaching at St. Anastasia School for 36 years. I live in Hutchinson with my husband, Dave, and our four children. I am a lifelong member of St. Anastasia Catholic Community.

A lot of things have changed through the years but one thing remains the same is that I love teaching children at a Catholic School. Through my many years of teaching the most important things have remained the same. These include:

- Love and respect for my students;
- Working with dedicated parents;
- Using a faith filled approach;
- And working with a great professional staff.

At St. Anastasia School we continually strive to keep these core values while adapting to new technologies and methods. Including:

- The use of Smartboards;
- Student Chromebooks;
- And offering diverse learning methods to better meet individual needs.

Some interesting things about me are:

- I started teaching at St. Anastasia after graduating from the College of St. Benedict.
- Through the years I have taught about 540 students, including Lindsay Whalen and 20 parent-child sets.

I have enjoyed the many years of teaching at St. Anastasia School. It has been a pleasure and an honor of teaching former, present, and future Saints.
